

Our Readers

One of the largest readers of a weekly newspaper in this city, it behooves us to ask the family to pay careful attention to the expiration dates on their subscription accounts. Over our list we find many whose subscriptions have expired and who have not given attention to statements from them. A number of subscriptions are being renewed and the accounts turned over to our attorneys for collection. We beg to say that we have a fine newspaper well worth its price. We want anyone to feel that they are obligated to take the paper. The Times and Herald is sold strictly upon its merits. Because of these factors and policies we are insistent that subscription accounts be paid in advance. Perhaps 80 percent of our readers do pay in advance. You must pay in advance for your daily papers, magazines, etc. If each of our readers were owing us it would mean that we have nearly $8,000 coming in, are weeding out the "dead weight," collecting their accounts and then if they re-subscribe we do not put their names on the lists until they pay it or bring in the money in advance. We do not deny any man or woman who reads the Hartford newspaper. We want to show interest and good intention to them though, to show them that we are waiting for them half way. By paying this issue aside from the date of expiration, put your name upon the left hand corner of this paper wrapper, if paper is wrapped, and if it does not have a date of October 1930 on the subscription has expired and remittance is in order.

1-For California

crossing near the Edward Nitschke farm two miles south of Burnett about 4 o'clock.

Death was instantaneous to the father and mother, but persons on the scene within a few minutes after the crash, declared that there was a spark of life in the child, but she died before Dr. H. J. Heath of Juneau, physician, who was called, arrived on the scene.

The body of the father lay about fifty feet from the crossing, while the bodies of the mother and child were about ten feet farther south, the mother apparently having made a desperate effort to protect the child, whose body was partly enfolded in her arms.

The bodies were removed to the A. A. Sielaff undertaking parlors at Juneau and later removed to Rush Lake where funeral services are expected to be held.

Mr. and Mrs. Henshaw had left the home of his brother at Mayville shortly after 3 o'clock, in company with Mr. and Mrs. Bentzine, neighbors, the Henshaw's having taken the lead, because they knew the road better.

By a peculiar twist of fate, two hogs, which Mr. Henshaw was carrying in a crate in the rear of the truck were not killed. One of the hogs, however, was so badly injured that it was killed, while the other made its way to a nearby cornfield and helped itself to the corn that was lying about. This hog was later caught and taken by Mr. Bentzine, who continued on his way to the Henshaw farm at Waukau to do the chores there.

The only survivors of Mr. Henshaw are his brother, Roy, of Mayville, his sister, Mrs. Ethel Moldenhauer, of Eureka, and a brother, Bert, of Waukau, also a farmer.

Officials seeking identification of the victims found a purse in Mr. Henshaw's pocket, containing his driver's license, although Mr. Bentzine had already returned to Mayville and informed the victim's brother, Roy, of the terrible tragedy.
